ALBION C. COOK AND
T. COOK
1943

Now bursts of passion sound, and in every breast there thrills

The sweetest memories of the past, while hope for future fills
Our souls with eager longing, expectancy and doubt:
Cares and sorrows quickly vanish in the orchestra's wild rout:
The curtain slowly rises, and the overture is done:
Attend ye then, good people, for the new play has begun.

Pantheism.

From the Italian of Carducci.

YE watchful stars, ye heard it not from me,
To thee I told it not, all-seeing sun.
Her name, the flower of all fair things that be,
Echoed within my silent breast alone.

Yet in the quiet night do star and star
Tell to each other what I would conceal,
And the great sun, down in the west afar,
To the pale moon my secret doth reveal.

Upon the wooded hill and in the plain,
Each flower reveals it to each bush and tree;
The very birds, in flying, sing again,
"At last, sad poet, love has captured thee."

I never told it, but with glorious shout,
Do heaven and earth her name belovèd call,
And while the acacia pours its fragrance out,
"She loves, she loves thee!" whispers the great All.

E. L. WALTER.

Northern Michigan.

WAVE upon wave of tumbling azure lake
And curving wave on wave of yellow sand
Surge upon silent plains of pine-clad land,
Or bleak, wind-wasted hills. In lonely brake
Wind-flower and trailing arbutus awake;
Blue fleur-de-lis and orchid lift a band
Of strange, un-flowerlike faces. Berries, tanned
To richest reds and browns, sweet pasture make,
Whereof the shy wood-creatures may partake.
There, deer, alert for aught of human brand,
And fiercer-natured things, and alien snake.
Above, Italian skies. On every hand
The silence sings. From green-tressed forests fanned
A-time, the winds tremendous music shake.

ISABELLA M. ANDREWS.

Sonnet.

AS daylight fades away beyond our sight
And tired mankind draws nearer balmy rest
Some one ideal rises in the breast
To be companion of the drowsy night,
To hold to duty, 'till the growing light
Of morning, in its varied splendour drest,
Culls to the world, repeats its cold behest
Fading the vision in a memory bright.
Thus it is best; that we should learn to know,
To cherish as the daily trials go,
Some presence, ever helpful, day to day,
Be it a thought, a spirit, or some form
Dwelling in sense's lineaments warm—
Our truest comfort, then, now and alway.

B. P. B.

The Poet and the Philosopher.

THERE lived a great and good Philosopher and a dreamful Poet, and it came about that they were great friends. This should be so for all know that Philosophy and Poetry are one. The love of Nature was in them both. The Philosopher loved her because he mirrored his soul in her beauties, the Poet, because he mirrored her beauties in his soul. So it happened that they wandered much in the country together, the Philosopher seeking always truth in beauty, the Poet, the beauties that lay hid in Nature's truths. Their way to the woodland lay through an open field, and on a rising knoll grew high a broad-leaved mullen. It towered far above the drooping grasses and held its golden head proudly towards the sun.

Then the Philosopher said unto the Poet:

"Behold the lesson of the mullen stalk. See how the worthless thing raises its useless head far above the rich grasses. Thus it ever was in life. True worth is modest, and ignorance is pride."

But the Poet, turning his dreamful eyes to the mullen, shook his head and smiled but said no word.

The autumn came riding over the westward and the leaves dropped. The grasses withered and dried, the mullen, too, grew brown but it held its head as proudly to the sun as ever. And the Philosopher said:

"Behold again the lesson of the mullen. When the grasses had lived their sweet lives through, they bent and matted a warm cover for the earth, but the mullen's pride makes uselessness reproach."

But again the Poet smiled.

Winter spread purity abroad, and all things were white, save where the ugly mullen reared its head and shivered in the chill north wind. And the Philosopher said yet once more.

"Now see ye, O Poet, that worth spoils not perfection, but folly can blot the fair face of purity itself."

And every day during that long winter would the Philosopher draw sage lessons of folly and condemn the mullen, and always would the Poet smile through his dreamful eyes.

One bitter cold day they stood near the mullen as of old. The north wind drove a few flakes across the trees and was muttering always of snow, more snow. The pines, too, looked far to the north and sighed of the old Storm King. As the Poet and the Philosopher watched, a little bird, numb with cold and hunger, fluttered feebly down the wind stream. She could just flutter her poor, tired wings and seemed about to drop, and when she saw the mullen all alone there in the snow, she flew weakly to it and perched upon it and ate of its seeds. While they watched her she had finished and, strengthened, flew aloft, leaving a trickling echo of June-day song. But the weight of her spring had broken the mullen and it lay upon the snow.

"Ah, friend," said the Philosopher, "man's wisdom is folly in itself. Should he know all the lesson in the little mullen stalk, he would know eternity itself."

But the Poet smiled again through his dreamful eyes.

STEWART EDWARD WHITE.

Lost.

SAD little meadow breeze
Lost out at sea,
Dost thou miss the roses?
Dost thou miss the bee?
All night thy wanderings
Were on the deep;
No wakeful lily said,
"Come here and sleep."
Waves cold and restless
Dampened thy wing;
No joyous bobolink
Leaped up to sing.

LAWRENCE A. McLOUTH, '87.

Prof. Volney M. Spalding.

PROF. VOLNEY MORGAN SPALDING was born in East Bloomfield, Ontario County, New York, January 29, 1849.

His early years were spent upon the farm, the district school affording the only available means of intellectual growth. In 1864, the family removed to Michigan and settled a short distance east of Ann Arbor. Here for three years Volney assisted in the cultivation of his father's farm and attended the city schools as circumstances might permit.

In 1867, he was able to begin systematic preparation for the classical course in the University, and in 1869 he was admitted. Two college vacations were spent on the western shore of Lake Michigan in the work of the Lake Survey. In his senior year he was President of the Students' Lecture Association. In 1873, he received the degree of A. B.

A decided fondness for the profession of teaching led him to accept the principalship of the high school at Battle Creek, Michigan, for the year 1873-74. In connection with his duties as principal he taught Latin and Greek. At the end of the year, though strongly urged to remain, he decided to accompany the superintendent to Flint, where he became principal and teacher of science in the high school. A matter of discipline, in which he was not fully sustained by the school board, led Mr. Spalding to tender his resignation and to insist upon its acceptance.

Early in 1876, he returned to the University and began graduate study in Geology with Professor Hilgard, in Zoölogy and Botany with Professor Harrington.

In 1876, when the latter went abroad the subjects he had been teaching were assigned to Professor Spalding.

From that time to the present he has had full control of the work in Botany, as instructor, assistant professor, acting professor, and, since 1886, as professor.

His vacations have been utilized by Professor Spalding as far as possible in the prosecution of his studies. A vacation with Professor Tyson at the University of Pennsylvania, two vacations with Professor Goodale at the Harvard Summer School, a vacation with Professor Farlow at Wood's Hall, portions of a vacation with Professor Wilder at Ithaca, with Professor Smith at New Haven, and a summer's work with Professor Detmer at Jenna, give some evidence of his untiring activity and determination to avail himself of the best methods of research.

When Mr. Spalding was appointed instructor in 1876 he was put in charge of all the Biological work then done in the literary department with the exception of systematic Zoölogy. It included systematic, structural and cryptogamic Botany, elementary Botany, comparative Anatomy and animal Histology. For all this one instructor and two assistants were provided. The same group of subjects now requires the time of two professors, three instructors and three assistants.

In 1876, the facilities for Botanical study were very meagre. In its new quarters the Botanical laboratory possesses some very excellent apparatus, instruments enough to accommodate satisfactorily a hundred or more students, and a good working library. The number of students pursuing advanced courses in Botany shows a most gratifying increase. From among the students trained in research by Professor Spalding, one in government employ has been engaged for several years in the study of "peach yellows," another is now studying the vine disease in California, a third has been assistant in vegetable Pathology in the U. S. Department of Agriculture, while several others are professors of Biology and Botany in various colleges.

Though Mr. Spalding's energies have been given so largely to the building up of his department he has still found time to make contributions to the Botanical Gazette, American Naturalist, Academy, American Journal of Forestry, Therapeutic Gazette, Physician and Surgeon, and School Moderator.

Among these contributions are the following: "The Plains of Michigan," "Distribution of Plants," "Asa Gray," "Botany in the High School," "The Scientific Advancement of the Age and its Relation to Education," "Commercial Distinctions of the Narcotic Plants," "Poisonous Species of Rhus," "Forestry in Michigan."

For several years he has been employed as special agent of the Forestry Division of the U. S. Department of Agriculture and has prepared a monograph upon "The White Pine and Conditions of its Growth in Michigan, New England and Elsewhere."

He is also engaged upon an "Introduction to Botany for Preparatory Schools."

The high esteem in which he is held by his scientific brethren is shown by their electing him President of the Botanical Club of the American Association for the Advancement of Science for the year 1891-92.

As a lecturer, Professor Spalding is clear and concise, using exactly the right word in the right place; as an investigator, painstaking to a fault; as a teacher, intolerent of pretenders and shirks, but full of patience and consideration for the faithful and conscientious, striving to imbue them with his own spirit and enthusiasm.

Of rugged Scotch-Irish ancestry, he is a man of strong religious convictions; a deacon of the Baptist Church and an active trustee of the Students' Christian Association; he is liberal in his sympathies, and ready to take his share in the promotion of any good cause; in personal character most lovable, his friendship breeds perpetual benediction.

In 1876, Professor Spalding was married to Miss Harriet Hubbard of Battle Creek, a woman most heartily in sympathy with his plans and aspirations. Her unostentatious, helpful life came to its early close in October, 1892.

I.

If you were nineteen
And I a bit older,
I'd love you and woo you
And win if I could.
If you were too coy,
I'd be but the bolder,—
If you were nineteen
And I a bit older.

II.

If you were nineteen
And I a bit older,
I'd ask you to love me—
You would, would you not?
And then be my own
Till the granite hills moulder,—
If you were nineteen
And I a bit older.

III.

Since you are nineteen
And I—a bit older,
I'll carry your skates
As an old bother should,
And then at your door
Kiss your hand somewhat colder
Than, were you nineteen
And I a bit older.

My Pipe.

WITH what delight
This summer night
I wander thro' the city,
As on the street
My falling feet
Awake a pleasant ditty.
And thro' the trees
The evening breeze
Upon its way goes singing,
And far on high,
O'er moon-lit sky,
The stars their flight are winging.
But then all this
Would be no bliss,
If no one had invented
This pipe of clay
To fill my way
With clouds so sweetly scented.
My! what grand dreams
And mighty schemes
Come down when one is smoking,
But one, two, three,—
They've gone you see,
Don't like that kind of joking!
A pipe's the thing
For fall or spring,
For joy or woe, or sorrow,—
But ah, you're out,
You foolish lout,
Tra-la, until to-morrow!

I. K. FRIEDMAN.

Hemph=um.

The following fragment, but recently discovered, is supposed to have been written about 1900, A. D. Hemph, an English school-teacher at ANN ARBOR-ON-HURONE about this time, was noted for his efforts to reform the spelling of the period and the following is doubtless a fragment written in his honor by one of his pupils.

There is no poetical conception in the Hemph=um, but the lines are even and metrical.

With apologies to Orm, Bede, Chaucer, Spenser, and Hemph.

W^{HILOM} as of olden tales speken us
& eke bigge bookes tellen us
Ther was a grete Cite
That was highte Ann Arbor
& ther waren a collage of fayr renoun
Far and wide in mani tun
For its knowledge and wisdom grete
Had mani lads and lassen fine
Led ther to seek lerning
& ye culture in ye divers kinds
Of subjects thet fill the minds
Of mozte lerned skolars
& of hem and of ther wayes
Wil Ic this tale containe.

Ther was a Prof, ther was
O grete renoun & lerning
& he to ye clerkes dide give
Instruction in ye tales of olden tyme.
But eke his classes wer a bore,
For the Prof wes a GRINDE
Of muche renoun,

And muche ye clerkes his
 Worke did fearen
 For wys he wes & depe in lerning
 But to techen could he porely.
 Fayr he was of speche
 But a times unseemly,
 In ye mysteries of speche
 Waren he a feend ful depe,
 With "Vowele Gradation &
 Mutation" wes he muche in luv,
 And on thes leggen he grete stresse,
 Muche he dide ye diggs luv
 Who wud for him searche
 After idiomes & strange speche;
 Mani essaze dide he write
 Of things most learnedly,
 & a boke he published
 Ful of dul and grusom reson.
 Swiche wil ye clerken make
 Muche anxiete and sweate,
 When they over it wil pore
 In ye longen wintre nightes;
 Foud waren he of "Star Chambere"
 And ye long examinatione,
 Ne wes he nor sparen,
 In giving a condicoun
 To ye stayd thoughtful Junior,
 As wel as gai & friski Freshman.
 Terror had he thout he wes,
 To ye chronik bolter
 & ye wicked cribber,
 But it tuk ye whol semestre
 For to him it to oecure,
 Thut ye wholen classe
 Writ ther lessons in ye boke,
 In wiche he had forgotten
 Ere to loke;
 Both lads and lassen all,
 & eke ye model skolar,

So that he an examination
Dide giv ful of unheard of Wordes & questions
Suche as smote ye hart
Of ye moste lerned skolar.

Schaven waren hise berd
& ful smoothe his face,
His dresse wes gud
But he ne wes nevere gai,
Spectacles wore he to aid hise site
& to see hise clerken behaven rite,

A Song.

LAUGHING eyes that greeted mine,
Once, with glances yielding-tender,
Grow indifferent, cold and strange,
Hide from me their fatal splendor.

Ah, well-a-day,
Summer skies so quickly change,
Roses bloom to fade away.

Once, secure, my heart hath known
Frail delight in fair completeness;
Gay moths, dallying with wild flame,
Give a life for such brief sweetness.

Ah, well-a-day,
Restless winds no man may tame,
Fleeting day-dawns will not stay.

KENT ROLLA DUNLAP.

Preparation.

LAY aside the cigar boxes
For a better day,
Put the bottles in the garret,
And the corkscrews all away,
Sweep the carpet, dust the mantle,
Put away the "blues" and "reds,"
Hide the clothes and dirty linen
Out of sight behind the beds,
Put away the mileage tickets,
Tear up "Ypsi Motor" checks,
All the "billet-doux de Dudy"
Notes from Regent, Prof. or Prex.,
Take down all the "high" art treasures,
That adorn the wall,
All the cuts of "Jove" and "Psyche"
And of "Eve Before the Fall,"
Hide all Balzac's works and Zola's
And the realistic school,
Bring out books on Anglo-Saxon,
"King Horn" and the "Aeneas Rule,"
Spread 'round flights in English I,
All the fruits of late research
That some other fellow's done,
Bring out all the masterpieces
Aired in Greek and Latin "Sem,"
Those that brought admiring glances
From some antiquated "fem;"
Pile up books on "Trig" and "Conics,"
Spanish, Latin, Greek and French,
One of Spencer's famous lectures
And a few by "Gawgie" Hench,
Place them on the shelves and tables,
In a nice artistic way,
For we have just received a letter,
Mamma will be here to-day.

A Kneipe of the Gods.

"O Naiadum potens
Baccharumque valentium,
Nil parvum, aut humili modo,
Nil mortale loquar. Dulce periculum est.
O Lenæe seque deum
Cingentem viridi tempora pampino."

THAS long been my purpose, Hermes, my son," spoke the almighty Jove, "to celebrate one of those quiet events that seem to be of such great repute among the pleasure-loving moderns. Take they wand and buckle on thy skates and go forth to summon my fellow divinities.

To-night we will renew our youth as befits creatures of Olympian kin.
But stay! Herm, my boy, neglect not to conceal from the spones of our friends
the true

cause of the council, lest the bout be interrupted. Tell Bacchus, the jolly lout, to fetch a cask of that new beverage called beer. I wish to try what flavor it imparts. Be off, lad, and return with all speed with thy tidings."

The dutiful messenger vanished lightly into the air, and Jove, with a cautious glance about him settled back among his cushions.

Although the powerful God was ruler of the air he was by no means ruler of himself. Juno, his watchful wife, took care to maintain a preponderance of domestic authority, and numerous household broils had taught the God that discretion was a trait almost allied to virtue. As he reclined among the scented tapestries adorning his couch he mused upon the possibilities in store for the night.

"There's the Argus, my wife's pet monster," he said half-aloud. "I'll borrow the animal and put him in the court without to guard against intruders. Those eyes of his are keen enough and with a hundred or more of them he ought to prove a valuable source of safety. Then there's old Janus. I'll make him sit at the entrance at the foot of the table. He can enjoy the feast with one side of his head and still keep a couple of eyes on the inner door. But the noise of the revelry! I had forgotten that."

The monarch arose and paced the hall, stroking his chin with his finger tips. Suddenly he paused and shouted: "I have it!"

A peal of thunder from a clear sky went rolling over the hills, dying away in the distance. Jove realized that he had spoken too forcibly, and with hasty steps went to look into the court. Everything was still and he returned slowly to his couch with a satisfied expression on his royal face.

"I'll have Aeolus let loose the winds to-night," he said, "and my brother Poseidon shall lash the sea into frenzied fury. That will conceal all sounds of our merriment." A few moments passed. Jove sat silent and thoughtful. Suddenly a smile of malicious delight came over his features. Just then a voice of quick-silvery sweetness said: "Sire, I have discharged well thy commands and have returned to obey thee further. But my lord seems pleased—some thought perhaps."

"I have just bethought me of one Tantalus," replied Jove, "of whose capacity for drink there are many tales being noised about. Go bid him to the feast. He is a mortal and shall prove how he compares with such god-like tanks as we. And do thou prepare the tables and couches, Hermes, my boy, and fail not to be present at the festivities thyself. We may perchance need thee."

The benevolent gaze of the omnipotent God rested on the boyish form of Hermes. He loved to behold youthful vigor, and the tender appellation of my boy or my son, always bestowed, was always sincere. Relationship among the divinities is a difficult matter to trace, but, if rumor is to be depended upon, the honor of being a son of Jove might rightly be claimed by the majority of the young men of the realm.

The time for the feast had arrived and the guests were all assembled. Bacchus was chosen king of the feast. He laid aside his vine chaplet and bade the guests recline. The warlike Mars unslung his shield and sword, Neptune stacked his trident in a corner, while Orpheus hung his lute on a gas jet. Tantalus was there and took his seat near the source of supplies, thereby causing looks of doubt to appear on many faces; but soon Ganymede set all thoughts of impartiality at rest. Outside, the winds shrieked and howled in ghoulish delight and the booming of the waves of the sea was plainly heard. Everything was working to a charm, especially the beer and the host was confident of the enjoyment his guests were having.

"Gannie, m'son," called Jove. "Fill up these cups again and don't let them get empty. I'll not have it said that my guests depart thirsty."

All eyes watched Tantalus. This worthy mortal was partaking freely but as time went on seemed to be less affected than his neighbors. Vulcan and Mars were beginning to feel the potent affects of the new nectar and entered into a heated discussion concerning the merits of certain implements of war. Orpheus was trying to explain to Pluto how it was that he lost his Eurydice, saying that if he had not loved her he would not have looked back to see how she was getting along. Jove and Bacchus were growing hilarious over the reminiscences of their amours, and in fact the time when unanimity of thought ceases and disorder begins, had come.

"A song, a song!" shouted Jove. Orpheus seized his lute and began: "Tra-ra-boo"—

"Fie! Fie!" shouted Janus with both mouths, "Chronos himself was wont to chant that." Vulcan grasped his sledge and made for Orpheus, but his game leg proved a disastrous enemy and with a lurch he disappeared beneath the table. A roar of laughter came from the others. "Whee-e-e!" shrieked Bacchus. "Here goes another cup to Jove! Everybody drink to his jugs of the air. Down with it, Pluto, old boy. Wazzer (hic) matter?" The God of the lower world staggered up to him and fell into his arms, a helpless wreck. The shock was too much for the king of the feast, and both rolled on the floor, howling with delirium.

Jove nudged Phoebus and said, "Phoeb', old boy, I'll bet thou canst not drive thy old sun cart t'-morrow." Tantalus alone was in his natural condition. Nothing seemed to move him. He looked with pity upon the helpless pile of divinity strewn about, and drained his cup. The last view of things Jove had was the sight of Tantalus sitting before the cask with his mouth under the spigot. That appealed to his pride, or envy, or something, and with an effort he exclaimed, "Tau'lus (hic) be thou thirsty for ever (hic) more."

For 'Iber Cup.

DRINK but that which bringeth joy
Health of heart cannot destroy;
Drink and part your lips to laugh
Ere the cheering cup you quaff.
May no tear of sorrow fall
In the cup to poison all.
But it sure can hold no cheer
Brighter than the eyes that peer
O'er the brim, no draught more sweet
Than the lips the crystal meet.
God of health then bless the draught,
As 'tis brewed and poured and quaffed.

Too Late.

“TOO late, too late,” the echoes ring,
From cliff to cliff I heard them fall,
And onward on their flight they sing,
“Too late, the thing is past recall.”

“Too late, too late,” they moan and sigh
And fill this weary heart of mine,
Must I forever hear this cry,
“No breakfast-after half-past nine?”

A Tragedy.

THEY WERE sitting side by side upon the bank of the river. The cool water rippled quietly at their feet, while the gentle breeze scarcely moved the leaves overhead. They sat very close to each other, and all their thoughts of the outside world had fled; they did not perceive the moon fade away behind a cloud, nor did they perceive a dark object which emerged from the woods behind them. See! it draws nearer! It creeps along under the dark bushes; it glides from tree to tree like a treacherous tiger approaching its prey. Will they see it? Alas, no, their thoughts are elsewhere.—And the black object draws nearer, nearer. Now it is upon them! They may yet escape—no, it is too late. Two blows have fallen, and two fair, young lives have fled—and the black object, as he drops the two chickens into his bag, says, “Dis an jes about de best piece ob work dat dis ole coon ebber did. Won’t de ole womm open huh eyes, though?” and he disappeared again in the wood.

The Book Worm.

HE'D READ the poets
of all climes
And read them in the tongues they wrote
He knew their metres
and their rhymes,
It was a treat to hear him quote.
"Which poet do you like the best?"
I asked. He straightway answered, "Pope,
His lines are better than the rest
To advertise my brand of soap."

Philosophy Course 1.

IT REALLY took my breath away
To hear her recitation
In Dewey's class that summer's day
On Mental Aberration.

An eight-day clock for nine days wound,
She went on fast and faster,
She shook the trembling campus ground
And broke the poor wall-plaster.

At last she sat and then she said
—O all ye saints defend her!—
Unto the girls that sat ahead,
"I busted my suspender."

I. K. F.

O N A balmy summer morning
When no child of nature pines,
Stood a fair and lovely presence
'Mid the morning-glory vines.

Oh my lady, tall and stately,
Oh my lady, grand and fair,
Such a wealth of winning graces!
Such a gleam of golden hair!

And I stopt in adoration,
Rapt in wonder and surprise;
Marvelling that so fair a vision
Stood beneath the azure skies.

She has gone- -I cannot find her,
A sweet perfume fills the air;
And I look in vain, and wonder
At the maiden's beauty rare.

Still the birds sing in the branches,
And the sun in heaven shines;
But I left my heart forever
'Mid the morning-glory vines.

Philosopher Meade.

O H Anaximander!
Your chaos I slander,
Your doctrines in nonsense I smother.
I murder your sayings
With assinine brayings
On the otherliness of the other!

Oh! poor Aristotle,
Your wisdom I bottle
And spout it with eloquence comic.
With more zeal than prudence
I gorge my poor students
With world-generation atomic.

Oh Plato, poor duffer!
What pangs you would suffer,
What infinite agony mental,
If you could but hear
Me mix your idear
With Ideas of Kant transcendental.

Oh Berkely and Hume,
You would cuss, fret and fume,
And Locke, I'm afraid, would disclose a
Bad temper and caustic
When called a scholastic
Or reactionist from Spinoza!

Philosophers all
Don't think I have gall
In attempting to state your position,
For as I am a tute
And a poor one, to boot,
I have to display erudition.

A Pastel in Prose.

Barry Bulbert Carleton Porter.

He writes a poem. He pats himself on the back and says, "Lo! I am a genius." A smile crosses his infantile countenance. An idea flashes over his weak brain and he faints from the effect.

He arises once more, he grows resolute with new-born courage. "I will take it to an editor!"

He enters the sanctum of the Bursting Gas Bag. "Is this the editor?" boldly he asketh.

The man with the shears answers, "I am he."

"I have a poem," he loftily proclaimeth.

The editor reads the first line, he laughs; he reads the second line, he weeps; he reads the third line and teareth his hair. Now he taps his massive brow and exclaimeth, "Am I mad, O wild-eyed bard of Michigan, or art thou——"

Slowly moves his heavy boot, there is a dull thud on the stairs without, there is a mournful sob; and DeQuincey moveth homeward with a halting gait.

Will he write any more poems? We hope not, but he will.

Bancker.

MOVING 'long with vacant stare,
Gazing far away in air,
Cap 'way back upon its head,
Here comes Balaam's druped.
Give us, pray, some slight suggestion
How to solve a puzzling question,
Can it be the baby thinks,
As it squints its eyes and blinks?
Has it some good thought, or base,
Masked by such a lamb-like face?
Can you, faintly e'en, detect
Traces of an intellect?

As We Were Saying.

"HOW dear to my heart are the scenes of Ann Arbor," according to Bob Thompson's aggregation of wandering minstrels, commonly known as—but then the Banjo Club is just as bad. And what is more, the scenes do not change very much here in Ann Arbor. Tom Cooley still sneaks along with the same look of apology for living that he wore when a Freshman. He had reason for apology then, now he has Moore.

Speaking of Chickering, there seems to be no animosity between Hank Denham and Sam Kinne—purely a friendly contest. Hank is an awfully absent-minded fellow, though. On returning from a vacation he drove directly to a young lady's house and next day his trunk was delivered at the same place.

But probably the star "ladies' man" about college is Jenkins, I met him on the campus the other day and he exclaimed, "I say, old man, don't you want to exchange dances with me on your J. Hop programmes?" But Jenkins didn't go. Why? Ask any active member of the Committee, or even Snyder.

Fine fellow, that Snyder! He has been offered the position of advance agent for Burns & Lathrop's troupe of Circassian Snake Charmers.

And one cannot think of Cam Burns, without Lightner's image appearing before his eyes. Frank's engineering experience with schooners and bars, on the Missouri River, has made him very adept and he has been known, by one master-stroke, to have raised fifteen. He also has a habit of wearing together portions of three different suits of clothes and, with his separate and distinct swagger for each day, he is very effective. Dan Quirk, Dexter Mason Ferry, Jr., Dunn, Rex Case, and he are men who display uniformly delicate taste in their attire. They may be taken as examples of the results of minute study in a particular direction.

Then among the most studious men in college, generally speaking, is "Harmony" Wilkinson. He's always to be found in the Library, and some of the co-eds are beginning to think they are the cause thereof. However, a certain rumor would seem to indicate that there was no possibility of such being the case.

To pass from the studious to those of gayer propensities, have you noticed McAlvay wearing a 'Varsity sweater? He has so much of the bearing of an athlete about him that no one would ever question his right to wear it. It might result seriously if they did, for 'tis said he has the same habit that caused Varian such discomfiture at the J. Hop. "Prairie-dog" always carries his pistol-pocket well loaded, but when its contents fell on the floor, as he and a fair one were wending their way through the intricacies of a waltz, he longed to be a member of the Woman's League, so as to have an excuse for departing early.

You know the Glee Club gave a concert that night. Well, Sam Medbury, "my man Friday" to Manager Smith, was pondering over the programme when suddenly his curiosity got the better of him and he asked, "Who was this man Carmen who wrote so many U. of M. songs? What class did he belong to, any way?" His scholastic attainments are only equalled by those of our old friend Jenkins, who says he has authority for asserting that Prexy is so called because his real name is Praxiteles.

We have said so much about Jenkins that it is no more than justice to announce that his present necessity of wandering about the cold, cold world is due to the Inter-Sorority rushing agreement, on account of which none of them can take him in until next year. On their side, however, the loss by this agreement is compensated for by their gaining control of a majority of the organizations in college. Their power is far in excess of that of the Le Roy ring in '96 politics.

Success in politics, on the other hand, is not the only goal toward which one should strive. When we have among us such literary talent as that possessed by Ella Wheeler Wilcox Garnett, none should look askance at the life of a literary man or be loath to enter the field. Have you read his latest work? It is a portrayal of his own experience, entitled "The Never-fading Intensity of Love." His experience is quite opposite to that of a vast number of others, most notably among whom we find Sam Harris, whose love-affairs have been many and varied. He is now giving much of his time to reading French, and they say that he is doing good work in a course which he has not regularly elected. It is to be hoped that he will "get his credit."

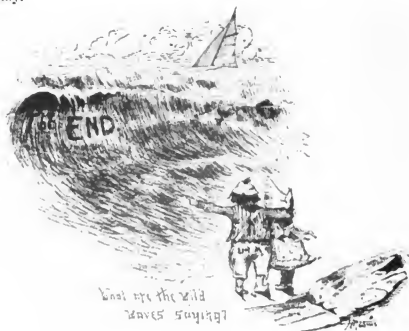

Space does not permit that we should proceed farther in our wanderings among the prominent figures which adorn the campus, and we can only bring ourselves to close with the insertion of two organizations which should have appeared on a previous page. These are The Twelve-penny Student Gentlemen, of Nelson Opera Co. fame, whose names may be found among those on page 87, and The Alfred DeMusset Club, whose crest appears below.

Our Benefactors.

We wish to express our appreciation of the generous support and kind assistance rendered us by the many friends of THE PALLADIUM. Especially are we under obligation to PROF. E. L. WALTER, PROF. A. C. McLAUGHLIN, PROF. P. R. B. DE PONT, PROF. W. W. BEMAN, MISSES DUNSTER AND RANDALL, MESSRS. KUHN, FRIEDMAN, RYAN, BALDWIN, WILLIAMS, SAWYER AND POWERS.

It is with pleasure that we here tender thanks to PARKE, DAVIS & Co., of Detroit, from whom we have been the recipients of numerous favors. Being deeply interested in the work done in the scientific departments of the University, this firm places its Reference Library, Herbarium, and Museum at the disposal of all students, especially courting the inspection of those interested in medicine, pharmacy, chemistry and botany.

This Is
The Way

To go to Chicago and the World's Fair. And while on that subject let us mention that there are several things to think of in this connection.

We will remind you of just two. HOW TO GET THERE AND WHERE TO STAY.

The best way to get there is to take any of the trains of the Chicago & West Michigan, Detroit, Lansing & Northern, or any of the lines of railway operated by them, and go direct to St. Joseph. When you get there the question of where to stay will answer itself. All West Michigan trains stop right on the grounds of The Hotel St. Joseph. You can secure accommodations at this magnificent hotel during the time you wish to spend at the Fair, and at the same time be in the midst of the most delightful outing point on the Great Lakes.

Four of the magnificent steamers of the Graham & Morton line leave St. Joseph and Benton Harbor for Chicago every day, besides numerous trains on the C. & W. M. R'y, affording opportunity of going to the city seven or eight times daily.

Also daily line of Steamers for Milwaukee, Wis.

The Hotel St. Joseph is modern in every sense. Every requirement of taste or comfort met. Amusements and recreation of all kinds are provided for guests. The table service is a leading feature. Rates are from $2 to $4 per day American plan, and from $1 to $3 per day European plan. Special rates will be quoted large parties on application or to those desiring long time contracts. For information, address,

HOTEL ST. JOSEPH, ST. JOSEPH, MICH.

Have received their Spring Importations of English and Scotch Shirtings in their own special designs and entirely new effects in Cheviot, Madras and Penany Cloths, and invite an inspection feeling confident that the result will amply justify their claim to be leaders in this department.

We are exhibiting many attractive novelties in Neck dressings, which far surpass all our previous efforts in this line, these are chiefly in Chantilly and Windsor four-in-hands and are characterized by their exquisitely delicate effects and fine combination of colors, specially designed to harmonize the prevailing tints in Dress and Negligee Shirts. Our specialties in Yachsmen and Wheelmen's goods are as usual of the most approved and complete character.

SYSTEM OF INSTRUCTION.

THE system of instruction is that of a graded course, comprising three consecutive annual courses of lectures, and consists of didactic lectures, clinical teaching, quizzes, recitations, and practical work involving manipulation or the use of instruments and appliances, examinations being held at the close of each session, and the student graded accordingly. In order to facilitate work in the practical departments and to fully employ the student's time, the sessions are so arranged that the first course students can devote more time to anatomy, dissections, chemistry and the dental laboratory. The classification of students and the schedule of lectures, demonstrations and clinics are such that the work of each year does not conflict with either of the other two. Special lectures are provided for advanced students who have successfully passed all previous examinations; also, special instructions in porcelain work.

United States Dental College Curriculum.

The annual Fall and Winter course will begin September 1st, and last seven months. The first month preliminary lectures are in order—when the regular Winter Sessions proper will begin, and terminate in March of each year.

The requirements for Admission and Graduation agreed upon by the National Association of Dental Faculties have been adopted by the United States Dental College.

WANTED!

SCHOOL SUPERINTENDENTS AND TEACHERS who are energetic, to represent our association. We prefer those who have had experience in canvassing for books, or other kind of soliciting. We have over 100 Teachers, School Superintendents and Principals of Schools now engaged in selling memberships, and they average to earn over $100 per month, each, where they devote their whole time to this work. A few earn as high as $300 and $400 per month. The business is much pleasanter than canvassing for books. Many teachers say they will never again enter the school work so long as we will give them employment. We give either salary or commission. Best of references required. We have many testimonials like the following:

"I take pleasure in testifying to the merits of the National Library Association. I have had many dealings with the firm and have always found them just and honorable. Everything I have purchased of them has been equal to their representations, and I have implicit confidence in their willingness and ability to do all they promise."—C. M. ARNOLD, Late Pres of Kentucky Classical and Business College, of North Middleton, Ky.

"After an examination of the catalogue and the gift books of the National Library Association of Chicago, I accord it my hearty approval."—GEO. W. RYLAND, Lieut. Gov. Wisconsin.

"The National Library Association dispenses with 'middle' men and brings the reading public nearer to publishers. I think the plan an excellent one."—J. W. AKER, Supt. Public Instruction, Des Moines, Iowa.

THE COLLEGE OF PHYSICIANS AND SURGEONS

CHICAGO.

This institution is located in the immediate vicinity of the Cook County Hospital. This Hospital has an average of 650 patients in its wards every day in the year. The morgue offers a large amount of material for post-mortems, which is used by the Pathologist at definite hours every day. Students are admitted to this College only on presentation of evidence of a thorough knowledge of English, Arithmetic and Algebra, Physics, Mechanics and Hydraulics, and two years' work in Latin. The course of study covers four years of seven and one-half months each, and requires an average of 900 hours work a year. This work is about equally divided in the course of the four years between lectures and recitations, laboratory work and demonstrations, and clinics and autopsies. The laboratories of the College for class purposes are six in number and accommodate an average of 112 students each. The university method is followed in presenting subjects and passing examinations. Credit is given on examination for work done in literary institutions. Credit of time is given where such work covers more than two-thirds of the required course. Correspondence with prospective medical students is solicited, and students passing through the city or attending the World's Fair are invited to visit the College. Terms begin late in September and continue until early in July. Clinical work goes on throughout the year.

All correspondence should be addressed to Dr. Bayard Holmes, 911 Venetian Building, Chicago.

furnished from photographs, designs sent us or designs furnished by us.

EVERYBODY knows that wall paper, with its vegetable paste and its colorings in animal glue, is unsanitary, and that to apply repeated layers of such is a very "nasty practice," as well as dangerous. Kalsomine is temporary, rots, rubs off and scales; paint stops "wall respiration" needed to purify walls. Send to us for a paper from Michigan State Board of Health report on this subject, recommending Church's Alabastine and plastic only for walls of dwellings.

THE DOCTOR.—"One layer of paper is bad enough, you have three here. Baby may recover but cannot thrive."

Alabastine forms pure, permanent and porous coatings, and does not require to be taken off to renew from time to time; is a dry powder, ready for use by adding water (the latest make is used in COLD water and is never sold in bulk); can be easily brushed on by any one; made in white and twelve fashionable tints, and in three shades, from which decorators make the balance of forty shades shown on their card.

N. B.—It is not claimed that all who live with in papered walls die much before their time, but they will enjoy better health with wall coatings (PPPP) Pure, Permanent, Porous and Pretty.

For Sale by Paint dealers everywhere.

KODAKS.

CONSIDER THEIR POINTS

First Point—The Lens. To take a good picture requires a good lens. The lens is the soul of a camera. Kodaks have the best lenses—hence, they take the best pictures.

Another Point—Bulk. Kodaks are compact. All other cameras are larger, heavier, and must be loaded oftener.

Still Another Point—Workmanship. Kodaks are carefully made. A test in actual use—the only practical test—is given every Kodak. If found perfect, it is loaded and sealed. We guarantee each one.

Other Points? Yes, plenty. Kodaks are adapted to hand or tripod use with roll film or glass plates, and are fitted with focusing index and counter for exposures. They are always sold loaded, ready for use. Consider these points.

Price, $6.00 to $65.00.

BETTER FEEL BETTER

We will not argue with you—if you hadn't sense and brains you wouldn't be where you are—you're learning to be somebody—you're working the mind too much—give the body a chance—in the harmony of all is the strength of intelligence—Keep outdoors—ride a bicycle—all indoors never made a man—ride a Columbia, the leading bicycle of the world, the bicycle you're sure of, proud of—guaranteed all over—We've a book about Columbias—too good to call a catalogue—beautifully illustrated—free at Columbia agencies, by mail for two 2-ct. stamps—We've another book, titled, "Outdoors"—original, illustrated articles on recreation, by the greatest outdoor writers: Terrestrial Flight, all about cycling,* by Julian Hawthorne; Yachting, by George A. Stewart, successor of Edward Burgess; Base Ball, by J. C. Morse, base ball editor Boston Herald; Horsemanship, by H. C. Merwin; Health and Rowing, by Benjamin Garro, late editor N. Y. Clipper; Recreation and Sport in Canoes, by C. Bowyer Vaux; Lawn Tennis, by F. A. Kellogg; Foot Ball, by Walter Camp. Illustrated by Merrill, Gallagher, Beals, Shute, and Young, with covers in ten colors. The only authoritative book on recreation; a work of value. That we may teach the Gospel of Outdoors, do good, and make money, we will send you this book, prepaid, for ten cents in stamps, just enough to pay the expense of handling it, and postage—nothing for the book itself.

PONDS' EXTRACT

If you wish to take REGULAR DAILY EXERCISE, and not be compelled to desist from work because of SORE MUSCLES, you must after exercising, THOROUGHLY RUB the MUSCLES with POND'S EXTRACT. By its use you are made QUICK and ACTIVE, and ALL SORENESS, STIFFNESS, or SWELLING is prevented, and you will AVOID the DANGER of TAKING COLD on going out after exercising.

We have a book full of testimonials from the most famous athletes; to quote them is superfluous. Almost everyone in training uses it. But don't expect some cheap substitute for POND'S EXTRACT to do what the genuine article will, for you will surely be disappointed. Manufactured only by

That's what I used to be, but I've experienced a change of heart, and I'll be a donkey no longer. Hanover, N. H., Oct. 27, 1892.

Messrs. Wright, Kay & Co.,

Gents: Inclosed find check for $84.75 to balance account, which please credit. Am very much pleased with the pins, both samples and bill ordered. They are the best I have seen while in college.

Yours respectfully,
R. D. MAYNARD.
